If you're travelling by train and need the bus at either end of the journey, ask for PlusBus. It's a simple, easy-to-use bus add-on to your rail ticket that lets you travel on most buses within the local PlusBus area as many times as you like.

It's quicker and cheaper than stopping to buy tickets for each leg of your journey.

Purchase your PlusBus ticket in advance, show it to the driver and off you go!

How does it work?

The cost of the PlusBus ticket will be the cost of the rail ticket plus an additional amount for each day of bus travel. It's simple and saves you money compared to the cost of multiple bus journeys.

Buy your ticket in advance, and then you can use it to catch a bus to the station to begin your journey.

PlusBus can be purchased with Single, Day Return, all types of period returns and rail season tickets. All season tickets with PlusBus allow unlimited bus travel in the local area for the whole period of your rail ticket.

However, PlusBus tickets can't be bought with rail tickets for train journeys which are entirely within one PlusBus area. Check that you can use PlusBus before you travel by visiting www.intalink.org.uk.

Where can I buy PlusBus tickets?

There are three ways you can buy a PlusBus day ticket (with your train ticket):

Rail station ticket office, simply ask for PlusBus when buying your train tickets;

Online from train company websites and some third-party rail ticket retailers.
(Not available as smartcard or mobile tickets)

Self-service ticket machines at selected rail stations.

You can check to see which stations are included and where to purchase on-line by visiting www.plusbus.info.
